

(Source: University of Wisconsin – Madison Space Science and Engineering Centre)

Figure 5b A satellite image that is a map. This map shows sea-surface temperatures on 5 September 2011. Maps like this are used by fishermen, weather forecasters and even by board-surfers. Comparing maps year by year gives evidence of climate change and clues to when more rain can be expected in southern Africa.

Figure 9a Africa

Figure 9a South Africa

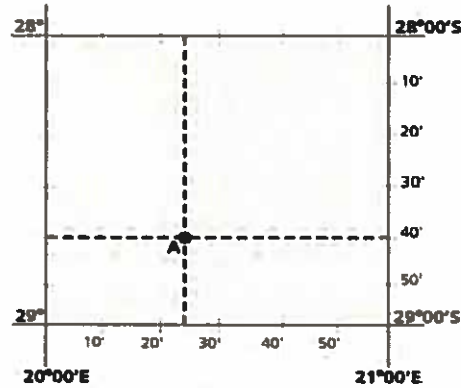

Figure 16b How to find a map position using the co-ordinates in degrees and minutes