SECTION A: COMPREHENSION

QUESTION 1

Read the following passage and answer the questions. In the case of multiple-choice questions, write down only the question number and the letter corresponding with the answer.

Now 54, Sabina Khoza started her working life as a salesperson. Then the company she was working for shut down and sold their delivery vans to staff members.

'I managed to buy eight of the kombis,' says Sabina. That was the start of her taxi fleet – which eventually grew to 17 vehicles. But crime forced her to abandon her budding taxi business. In fact, sick of the hijackings and violence, Sabina decided she needed a break from township life altogether.

And she didn't have to go far! A farm was for sale in Zuurbekom, on the outskirts of Soweto. 'It was strange,' she recalls. 'I'd just moved from Mofolo in Soweto and started off-loading my furniture when a group of people came to help.

'Once the work had been done, they disappeared without as much as asking for a cent. This surprised me. Township people do not do any work without being paid. 'On the fourth day I saw these people again. I asked where they were staying. It turned out they were living on my farm. When they realised I was the new owner, they begged me not to evict them.'

Sabina was sympathetic to their predicament, and realised she'd have to find a way to make the best of the situation. The opportunity came when her tenants approached her about breeding chickens.

'I had never come close to a live chicken in my life,' laughs Sabina. 'As a matter of fact, I was rather afraid of chickens.'

Still, she bought 10 chickens and a feeder – and waited for the eggs to come. And waited. And waited.

'Then one day a visitor told us we were actually rearing cocks without hens,' laughs Sabina. This setback didn't discourage her, though. Soon she had her hens and had also received training in how to raise chickens. 'I remembered that when I stayed in Soweto, I could only get chickens in Kliptown,' she says. 'So I went and spoke to people in the area. Then one of my tenants went there to sell the birds. We'd spent R11,20 on each chicken and sold them at R20 each. In less than a week, we'd sold our birds.'

'Since then, we've been getting chicks regularly from a supplier and we're currently producing 150 000 birds a year. We also supply supermarkets with vegetables.'

Khoza's successful farming venture incorporates the latest technology and farming methods, and additional community projects include vegetable and maize production, as well as a guest house, which accommodates trainee farmers.

'I train members of the community and offer them opportunities as partners, not just as employees,' says Sabina, who has won numerous awards, including the Department of Agriculture's Female Farmer of the Year in 2003 and the 2004 Shoprite Checkers Woman of the Year Award.

'During the festive season, when people go on holiday, I stay at home and make money from all the Christmas bonuses people have been paid. And when all the holidaymakers have returned home, I take leave and book myself into a luxurious hotel, glad to have missed the peak season,' laughs Sabina.

SECTION B: SUMMARY

QUESTION 2

Imagine that you are preparing an essay on 'Dieting and Eating Disorders'. Read the article below and extract SEVEN important points to include in your essay.

INSTRUCTIONS:

- Write your points in full sentences using NOT more than 70 words.
- Number your sentences from 1 to 7 and write only ONE fact per line.
- Write in correct sentences and use your own words as far as possible.
- Indicate the number of words you have used in brackets at the end of your summary.

Note that you will be penalised if you ignore these instructions.

There is a constant deadly battle between what teenagers want to look like and what they will do to get there. Teenagers fear that the weight that they've gained during puberty and teenage years is permanent.

They panic and desperately try to lose it. Once they start losing weight, people might compliment them, which makes them feel good. They may start to believe that losing weight will make them happier, but no matter how much weight is lost, it is never enough, and they are never happy.

Teenagers spend a lot of time worrying about what others think and they desperately try to conform to society's unattainable 'ideal' body image. They are led to believe that if they are thin, they will be accepted. Many of them are constantly exposed to images of thin models appearing on television and in magazines. This only reinforces their belief that in order to be happy, successful and accepted, they must be thin. These factors lead to many teenagers going overboard with dieting, which can then result in eating disorders.

NEXT WEEK:
 Afrikaans EAT Graad 12

Dieting is about losing weight gradually in a healthy way. Eating disorders are about trying to make your whole life better through eating or not eating food. Sufferers seek approval and acceptance from others and believe life won't be good until a bit (or a lot) of weight is lost, without any concern for the damage done to their bodies.

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa are two common eating disorders. Anorexia is when someone experiences a significant weight loss resulting from excessive dieting. Anorexics consider themselves to be fat, no matter what their actual weight is. Often they don't realise that they are underweight. They avoid food and taking in calories at all costs, which can result in death. Bulimia is characterised by a cycle of over-eating and vomiting. A sure sign is regular bathroom visits after eating so as to induce vomiting.

QUESTION 4 LANGUAGE AND EDITING SKILLS

The article which follows contains a number of deliberate errors in grammar and punctuation, as well as words within brackets which indicate the writer's uncertainty about which word to use. Read it carefully and answer the following questions:

DOME – THE DK PATRIOT

Inspired by TKZEE, Dome (has started/started) his music career in Grade Ten as the production half of kwaito group, Rossmoda. The crew soon dissolved and he formed a new one known as Scribe. He continued doing music as a hobby until he, at The National School Of The Arts, met up with former Skwatta Kamp member, Master Sip, widely known as Ngwenya, as well as a huge community of hip hop artists. '(Here's/Heres) were I cut my teeth,' Dome says, 'because the level of competition was so high.'

Dome started making tracks at the old Skwatta Kamp studio in Leondale. He simply (couldn't/can't) afford the rates and got hold of a sampler that had belonged to Jo'burg beat legend, Iko. Connecting Iko's sampler to his father's hi-fi, Dome was able to produce at the alarming rate of a hundred and fifty beats a week.

Dome says, 'I got into the circle of current hot properties from Soweto and I was able to assemble a host of artists for my first production series, Domestic Violins'.

'I sold the album out of my backpack and with the money I made, I bought my studio,' says Dome.

Dome continues to single-handedly direct the musical score of the South Western Townships. To a number of artists, his music has proved to be the key to massive airplay. To us, the DK patriot (holds/hold) the key to the future of Soweto hip hop.

(20)MOST IMPROVED SCHOOLS AWARDS

On Friday 14 March the Deputy President of South Africa, Phumzile Mlambo Ngquka, and Minister of Education, Naledi Pandor, awarded 42 high schools prizes worth over R3 million. The schools are located in all nine provinces and serve a range of communities.

The prizes went to 14 schools that achieved more 100 HG maths passes in 2007 and to 10 schools with the greatest improvement in mathematics in the Senior Certificate. In addition, 12 schools received language awards for outstanding improvement in the official languages of South Africa. Finally, 10 schools that demonstrated improvement in the numbers passing the Senior Certificate with endorsement and overall passes were rewarded. The principals and chairpersons of governing bodies were invited to receive their awards.

Ambassadors, major donors, provincial MECs, heads of education and representatives of all teacher unions attended the awards function.
