INTRODUCTION

A. What is Client Services and Human Relations?

Client Services and Human Relations teaches students to conduct themselves in a manner that is professional and proper to the workplace. It focuses on the importance of self-development and the development of others to the benefit of the company. The subject explains the impact this development has on the client service and the importance of client satisfaction to any company in terms of revenue generation.

B. Why is Client Services and Human Relations important in the Tourism programme?

Client Services and Human Relations is important in the Tourism programme since tourism is essentially providing a specialised service to clients. The greater the client satisfaction, the more successful the tourism venture will be. Therefore, a culture of client satisfaction must be instilled in all employees working in the tourism industry by equipping them with ways of achieving this.

C. The link between the Client Services and Human Relations Learning Outcomes and the Critical and Developmental Outcomes

In Client Services and Human Relations, students are able to:

- Identify and solve problems that arise, either in the daily running of a tourism enterprise or when dealing with the general needs of tourists as clients. Students' responses display that responsible decisions, using critical and creative thinking, have been made.
- Work effectively with others in a variety of contexts: as a staff member in the tourism office; as part of a service excellence team; as leader or guide to a tour group; as member of a particular organisation or as a member of a tourism project to involve and benefit the local community.
- Communicate effectively with clients, using visual and/or language skills in the modes of oral and and/or written presentation whilst showing awareness of possible communication barriers such as language or cultural chasms.
- Develop a sense of urgency because time is money and no client likes to be kept waiting.
- Create a safe environment for staff and clients.
- Encourage sensitivity to the needs of their fellow human beings.
- Contribute to the personal development of each student and the social and economic development of society, by being aware of the importance of self-improvement as key to personal success.
- Reflect on and explore a variety of strategies to learn more effectively those service characteristics and skills that are needed in a service business.

D. Factors that contribute to achieving the Client Services and Human Relations Learning Outcomes

Daily observation can be done when marking exercises of the previous day and class questions.

Assignments, case studies and tests can be done at the end of a topic. Tests and internal examinations must form part of internal assessment.

Any or all of the written tasks/feedback can be considered as evidence of competency in the theoretical component and be filed as such in a Portfolio of Evidence (PoE).
